VICTORY

The Hour of TRIUMPH

EVERYONE has been waiting for this very moment, the moment when Victory would come to our forces and the Nazis would be subjected to Unconditional Surrender and their days of oppression of smaller countries would cease. The day when peace would once again prevail in Europe and the peoples of France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Russia, England, would once more be able to walk the streets without fear of bombs and other terrors of war. It is a day that is too great for such jubilation as took place following the war of 1914-18, it is a day of great thanksgiving for the deliverance of all these peoples from the greatest scourge that has ever struck civilization. Joy is in our hearts, but we do not feel that it can be manifest while the knowledge of such suffering and sacrifice is still with us. Nevertheless we feel that we can join with our fellows in quietly celebrating this great victory for which we have waited so long.

OUR thanks are due the three great leaders who have done so much in leading their peoples to victory. Many times the days have been dark and troublous for Russia and England, and we think back of the time when France fell and England was faced with the prospect of fighting the war alone. We think back of such epics as Dunkerque, Dieppe, Stalingrad, Moscow; we think of the Battle of London, of Coventry, and the many other devastated towns and cities of England. We think of that first march against Poland, and heroic Warsaw, the fall of France and the pall that came over the world with that fall. We feel pride when we remember that the United States came to our aid and offered us aid all through these trying times. There is pride when we look back at the work of our heroic Air Force, the Navy, and finally the Army. All were carefully guided by the magnificent leadership of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Marshall Stalin, the late Pres. Roosevelt. The words of Prime Minister Churchill will carry on down in the history of the British Empire for all time to come. The heroic stand of the people of Great Britain will fill pages and pages of the history books of the future. Canadian history, too, will come in for its share of fame in the years to come. Canada's fighting sons and daughters have carved out a name in the world that will be hard to beat. Canada has not suffered as have those countries in Europe, but her share in the winning of Victory has been most outstanding and has meant much to the keeping of the Empire intact.

LET us not forget those who went forth to battle and now rest where they fell, those who paid the supreme sacrifice that this victory might be possible. Let us always remember those who have returned to these shores with disabilities suffered in helping to win this victory. For the sake of those who have died, let us see to it that these men are properly cared for at all times. We owe much to all our fighting sons at this time and continuously in the future. It is their willingness to go out and face the enemy that has brought us the reward we have so long hoped for —let us never forget that. Thus it is that in rejoicing in this day of victory, The Huntingdon Gleaner says—

Hats Off To Our Fighting Men

IT'S ALL OVER

THE WAR IN GERMANY IS OVER

Allies officially announced Germany surrendered unconditionally at 2.41 a.m. French time to-day.

The Canadian Legion Welcomes The Defeat Of Nazi Germany

The members of the Canadian Legion Chateauguay-Huntingdon Branch No. 81, join today in sober rejoicing at the defeat of a hated foe, one which many of them have met in combat in the war of 1914-18. They feel it their first duty to offer thanks for this victory and to offer prayer for those who have made the supreme sacrifice in attaining it.

The Canadian Legion will stand ready to welcome and advise returning personnel of the forces and will forever be ready to see that no injustices are done to those who have helped to bring this great day, and such a glorious conclusion, to the most diabolical war in our entire history. At the same time the members have not lost sight of the fact that final victory has not been achieved until Japan has been beaten to her knees, as Germany has today.

THE ROAD TO V-DAY

For the second time in little more than a quarter of a century Germany has failed in an attempt to become a dominant world power through force of arms.

In 1918 the armistice signed at Compiegne marked the end of the Hohenzollerns and Imperial Germany. Today Adolf Hitler and the exponents of a creed that, for a time, veiled the resurgence of German war lust under the guise of National Socialism, stand shorn of their power before the bar of world justice.

During the bitterest warfare the world had ever known the British Empire stood steadfast to the principles underlying the democratic way of life. The Empire, standing alone in the dark days after the fall of France, finally drew powerful allies in Russia and the United States. This war-born alliance must be knit even more closely in the days of peace if the reconstruction and stabilization of Europe is to be accomplished successfully.

Canada's part in the war has put the Dominion in the forefront of the world's nations. At sea, on land and in the air, men from the farms, the mines and the factories have carried into action the courage and resourcefulness inherent in the country's growth. On the home front Canada's war effort has been second to none in proportion to her manpower and resources.

Canadians will never forget that up to the close of hostilities in Europe the Dominion's fighting forces totalled upwards of 800,000 men and women—the pre-war strength of the armed forces was 10,200. Scarcely a family has been untouched by the absence of members on active service and thousands of families have known the sorrow of casualties.

In Britain's darkest hour the Dominion's soldiers stood virtually alone on England's eastern and southern beaches, Canadian airmen fought valiantly in the Battle of Britain to repel the Nazi threat in the skies and the small, but ever-growing Canadian Navy had a proud role in helping the Royal Navy protect the Atlantic lifeline. Those were the early days of the war.

Since then Canada's armed forces have added a golden lustre to the pages of the Dominion's military history. Never to be forgotten are the records of high achievement at Hong Kong, Malta, Dieppe, North Africa, Burma, Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium and Holland.

But the end is not yet. Now fighting forces of the United Nations move to the Pacific to thwart Japanese ambitions to obtain military and economic domination in the Far East. Japan's war lords cannot hope to succeed where Germany failed.

Mayor Greets News Of Victory

MAYOR W. E. S. McNAIR

This is a day of rejoicing, let us be glad and rejoice in it.

After more than five years of disastrous war, victory has come to us through the defeat and surrender of our powerful and unscrupulous foe. As we look back over the long and weary months we realize today how great our peril was.

When Europe had been overrun by the destroyer, and England stood alone in the path of the proud aggressor, the prospect seemed dark indeed. But true to her traditions, she did stand up to him and dared him to do his worst.

It is a proud memory that Canada at once ranged herself with England and that our little community did its part in accepting the challenge. We rejoice in the loyalty and self-sacrificing devotion of our young men and our young women too, who joined up for active service in the war. We owe a debt to them that we must ever remember and seek to discharge as we are able.

War is a costly business and the price has to be paid by those who enter into it, not only in material things but also in human life. This price, in full, we were called on to pay, not only in the unprecedented expenditure of money, but also in our most precious asset, the lives of so many of our gallant young men.

In our time of rejoicing over Victory let us not forget the price paid for Victory.

Let us remember the toil, sweat and tears and let us remember the precious gift of life that so many were called upon to give. Their names must be held by us in everlasting remembrance.

Let us remember the homes of those who went ahead to fight, and suffer, and die. The homes where anxiety and fear were ever present and the homes where there is mourning because of evil tidings that have come to them.

We are proud to remember too, the part played by those at home and in other parts of our country in the war effort. By their work in mills, and factories, and machine shops, and foundries, in the mines, and on the farms, who kept a constant stream of supplies going forward to those at the front.

Let us also be glad that such universal and generous response was made to the various appeals of the successive Victory Loans and for the Red Cross and other benevolent agencies.

Now that Victory has come, let us give ourselves with diligence and determination to the winning of the peace. As the men and women who have been on active service abroad, return to us, let us not only greet them with a cheer, but let us earnestly seek to help them get re-established in our life and fellowship.

We must care for the wounded, for those broken in body and spirit, for those anxious to get back to their old jobs or are seeking other kinds of work. This must be the first concern of our country and people. If it had not been for them and their comrades in the war, we should have lost our country, we should be an enslaved people.

We have shown ourselves capable of every task laid upon us in a time of war, let us address ourselves to the whole duty that faces us in the time of peace which we have now started.

W. E. S. McNair,
Mayor of the Town of Huntingdon

Canada's Role In Victory

The Canadian 1st Army under Gen. H. D. G. Crerar fought over some of northwestern Europe's most difficult terrain—the canals of Belgium and Holland's sodden acres—in the Allied drive into Germany.

After D-Day the 2nd Infantry and 4th Armored Division and 2nd Armored Brigade were sent to Normandy to form part of the 1st Canadian Army which also included British divisions, a Polish armored division and for a time Belgium and Netherlands brigades and a United States division.

The Canadian role, in co-ordination with British troops, was to break through the German anchor positions at Caen while the Americans executed a wheeling movement south throught Brittany, then east across France. From Caen the Canadians fanned out south to take Falaise, Aug. 17.

Once the Germans' Caen and Falaise hinge positions were broken the Canadians were given the job of cleaning up the Channel coast and the North Sea coast of Belgium the Allied left flank.

Antwerp Captured

By the end of September the Canadians were fighting in the Antwerp area. Early in October Canadians cleared the port area, but a force of 40,000 Germans were left behind on the Schelde coast to prevent the opening of the inland port of Antwerp as long as possible. The battle of canals, of dike crossings, of advances through flooded areas, and over dead flat land raged for a month and casualties were heavy in what Field Marshal Montgomery termed the finest operation of the Western Front campaign. Prime Minister Churchill told parliament there had been approximately 40,000 British and Canadian casualties in the drive into Holland and Germany.

With Antwerp open to Allied shipping the Canadians entered a three-month period of static warfare which ended Feb. 8 with the launching of the Nijmegen offensive against the Siegfried Line's northern end. Kleve, the northern anchor of the Line, fell four days later. The next big engagement for the Canadians was the clearing of Goch and the Hochwald forest which formed part of the vaunted Siegfried defences. The Canadians carried through the Hochwald Feb. 27 after Scottish troops of the 1st Canadian Army had cleared Goch a week earlier.

Then followed a month of hard fighting preliminary to that great day when the Allies Crossed the Rhine. The British 2nd and Canadian 1st Armies crossed Germany's great river barrier March 23, west of Wesel and the final stage of the battle of Europe started.

President of Board of Trade Message

GERMANY HAS SURRENDERED

It is great news, the war in Europe has ended. But what does it mean? Our heart is filled with joy and sorrow at the same time. It is a memorable day that history will write in big red letters. The news is bringing relief to the whole world, but it also brings serious thinking to Leaders and after-war planners and sorrow to countless mothers, wives and children, at the thought that someone close to their heart will not return.

After nearly six years of war, during which restrictions of all kinds, hard work and worries have been experienced by everyone, the surrender of Germany is surely an occasion to rejoice and thank the Lord for the blessings bestowed on our Canada. But the war is not over. No doubt the hardest part is won. We have been promised relief after Victory in Europe, but we must realize that Japan is still strong and vicious. Europe has to be fed and rebuilt. Heavy demands will be made on our food supply and our already depleted resources. Chaos, starvation, collapse of law and order are hanging over the world to-day.

We are winning the war, but are we winning the peace? How long will the big nations which were united in winning the war, be united in winning the peace? The afterwar problems are far from being solved. V-E day brings us face to face with the problem of industrial reconversion. How much war contract cancellation will take effect now with the announcement of Victory in Europe? Do we realize that 80% of our industrial production in Canada is now exported? What will be the effect when this production is stopped almost overnight? How many people will be faced with rearranging the whole course of their existence? Can the harnessing of all our resources and energies to win the war be indefinitely continued without serious complications?

Preoccupation with these problems I think, is a fitting celebration for V-E Day. We have been fighting a war against the things we dont want—Slavery and Barbarism—the struggle for the things we want is now starting, this battle has yet to be won.

A. LANGEVIN, President Huntingdon Board of Trade

Those Who Have Answered Call of Duty

Following is a list of all men and women who have answered the call of duty, according to the records kept at The Gleaner Office and in our possession at the time this issue was printed. Care has been taken to give the right rank and name of next of kin where such is known, but it is quite possible that some errors may occur in each of these. If such should have occurred, The Gleaner will be pleased to hear from relatives or friends in order that same may be corrected. The names that appear here are not all of persons actually located in the Beauharnois District, but all have some connection with people living in the district. Included, of course, are those who actually enlisted from the district and these are complete to the best of the knowledge at hand. It is possible that some names may not be printed here on account of the fact that we have no record of them. If such is the case there is no intention of purposely missing anyone and we hope that we shall be advised of any omissions.

In this list there appears 1190 names and there may be some additions. In World War I there were approximately 640 enlistments from this district, thus a comparison can be gained of the greater call that has been made on our manpower to bring this V-Day to us.

Salute the Boys Who Have Brought Victory

V-DAY is here!

The Hour of TRIUMPH

The war against Hitler and his Nazi hordes has been won—that great news has reached us at last. V-Day is here and the Hour of Triumph has arrived. Gloomy days have turned to joy at the news of this great victory. The hope is that peace will bring in its wake a more marked unity of nations and settlement of international disputes without resort to warfare. The submission of Germany and the ideals of Nazism should put an end to further fears of aggression and make the future safe. Thanks to men of the Navy, Army and Airforce for this splendid victory over what was once a very formidable foe—they have saved our way of life and many have given their lives that we may continue to enjoy liberty and freedom.

Canada Writes Noble Chapter in War Annals

Three Branches of Armed Forces Grow up With Second Great War to Play Big Part in Nazi Defeat

By The Canadian Press

Canada's fighting forces hail victory in Europe with the knowledge that the three branches of the service grew from gallant pioneer units in the first stage of the battle against Germany to an impressive symbol of the Dominion's contribution to the cause of the United Nations.

Trained for a peacetime world, Canadians streamed from the farms, the mines and the factories to bring the armed forces to a total strength of more than 765,000 including nearly 32,000 women.

After the bitter days when Germany invaded Poland in September, 1939, Canada's army expanded until, for the first time in history, the Dominion sent into the field a separate Canadian Army formation. This was the 1st Canadian Army which fought up the Normandy beachhead through Belgium and the Netherlands to the gates of the Reich.

In the heartbreaking months of 1940 Canadian airmen helped repel the German air blitz on Britain as members of the R.A.F. The Royal Canadian Air Force now has a strength of some 203,000, serving in all parts of the world.

Since the early stages of the battle of the Atlantic when the Royal Canadian Navy served as an anti-submarine arm of the Royal Navy, Canada's naval service grew to a balanced fighting unit equipped for offensive as well as defensive action.

WIDESPREAD OPERATIONS

And behind this development in strength and reputation lay the story of Canada's part in the Battle of Britain, Hong Kong, Spitzbergen, Malta, Dieppe, North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France.

Three months after Canada's declaration of war against Germany, the first contingent of Canadian troops reached Britain Dec. 17, 1939, a second contingent arriving five days after Christmas. In the meantime, Canadian airmen serving with the R.A.F. flew on early bombing raids against Germany. At home, the Canadian government drew up plans for training empire fliers within the Dominion.

The first R.C.A.F. squadron arrived in Britain in February, 1940, as Canadians in the R.A.F. were receiving first awards for gallantry in air action against Germany. Canadians training in Britain fretted for action as Norway fell and Nazi forces thrust through the Low Countries. Canadians were given orders to prepare for their first action in April after the invasion of Norway but the orders were cancelled.

Canadian army forces were ready to embark once more as Germany surged westward into France, but sailing orders were withdrawn when France fell and the few Canadians who had crossed the Channel earlier were evacuated.

Meanwhile Britons withstood the Nazi air blitz and Canadians in R.A.F. squadrons battled in the skies over London to help destroy 1,000 attacking enemy craft in three weeks.

At home, trained recruits from all parts of Canada went aboard in a half-dozen old United States destroyers the Dominion had taken over to aid in the Battle of the Atlantic.

In August, troops of the 2nd Canadian Division arrived in Britain, and, at the end of the year, Britain welcomed from Canadian training centres first graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

1ST CANADIAN CORPS

During the winter, the 1st Canadian Corps was formed and Canadians went to Gibraltar as tunnellers to aid in improvement of defensive positions there. The first R.C.A.F. fighter squadron was formed and more Canadian troops from Canada joined those already training in Britain.

After Germany started her Russian campaign in 1941, Canadians in the R.A.F. fighter wing went to the Russian front and the R.C.A.F. saw action with the Coastal Command. In September, Canadian army forces hit the headlines with their raid on Spitzbergen. In November the first Canadian tank troops arrived in England.

Following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbour and the United States' entry into the war, Canadian infantrymen serving in the Far East saw the fall of Hong Kong, Dec. 25, 1941. By New Year's Canadian airmen were flying in Malta's defence against Italian and German aerial bombardment. By now Canadians were serving in several theatres with some 200,000 in the army and 100,000 in air force blue.

The 1,000-bomber raid on Cologne, with R.C.A.F. crews taking part, made aerial history for the Allies on May 30, 1942.

Canadians struck at Dieppe Aug. 19, 1942, in the costly combined operations raid which formed a pattern for future attacks combining use of ground, aerial and naval forces together.

IN NORTH PACIFIC

Meanwhile, Canadian naval forces were taking a more active part in the battle of the seas. In October the Canadian Navy joined United States forces in occupation of the Andreanof Islands in the North Pacific. By the end of the year, R.C.A.F. squadrons, overseas numbered more than 30, Canadians flying with the R.A.F. numbered more than 25 per cent of the parent force's aircrews and R.C.A.F. bombers had flown over the Alps to blast Italian targets.

A detachment of Canadian troops of the 1st Canadian army joined the British 1st Army in North Africa in 1943 after the Royal Canadian Navy played an active part in joint Anglo-American landings there. Canadian corvettes now were operating in the Mediterranean.

On July 10, the 1st Canadian Division joined General Montgomery's army in the combined British-United States invasion of Sicily. The Allied thrust on Italy followed as Canadian forces were increased to a corps, aiding in the liberation of Rome and the smash into northern Italy.

Meanwhile, Canadians joined American forces in the unopposed occupation of Kiska Island in the Aleutians.

The long-awaited invasion of France June 6, 1944, saw the Canadian 3rd Division in the first assault force on the Normandy coast. The 2nd and 4th armored divisions joined the 3rd. On Aug. 7 a cheering House of Commons in Ottawa heard the news that Canada for the first time in history had a separate army formation in the field—the 1st Canadian army—holding the eastern end of the Normandy line against some of Germany's toughest troops.

Field Marshall von Kluge concentrated his main defence in the Caen area of Normandy to block the road to Paris and Canadians and British shared the honour of shattering the great Nazi army after weeks of heavy fighting. Their heroic fight allowed American columns to strike through Brittany and then eastward across France.

The Canadian Army moved into Belgium after liberating Dieppe, and other Channel ports and then played a big part in the capture of Brussels. In September the Canadian 1st Army moved across the frontier into Holland.

On Aug. 15 Canadians in the joint United States-Canadian service force, the veterans of Italy and Kiska, joined the Canadian Navy in the commando-like blows which helped knock out German forces in southern France, paving the way for the American-French landing parties.

VICTORY IS OURS!

WITH hostilities in Europe now brought to a close it is but natural to believe we will be able to procure a greater selection of all kinds of merchandise in the very near future. We have done our post-war planning and our plan calls for our greatly extending our retail store business and providing Huntingdon with a merchandising outlet that will surpass anything Huntingdon has ever had in the past. We all know right well we will have to provide employment for many more when the soldiers return home, with our plan of expansion in retail merchandising we fully expect to add personnel to our staff.

Courtesy to customers has always been practised by this store and we aim to keep it such.

Hats Off To Our Returning Heroes

TWO GREAT AND A GREAT VICTORY

V-DAY is a great day in our lives and a great day in the lives of the two men—Roosevelt and Churchill—who have planned for this day. The War in Europe has been won and the victory is ours. We are proud of this Victory, proud that we are a part of this great Empire and that we are subjects of a splendid King and Queen. Above all on this great V-Day we are proud of the men who have fought the battles which have resulted in victory for our cause. We hope ere long to see them returning to their homes and once more working in peace—something they have earned by right of conquest—and entitled to by right of sacrifice. We stand today with joy in our hearts and a thank you on our lips.

VICTORY HERE

Victory was announced today—we have conquered the Nazis at last. Hitler and his hordes will no longer run rampant over Europe, they have been beaten and peace will now reign once again in the war-torn countries of Europe. Together with the people of this district we offer our thanks to the men of the Navy, Army and Air Force for the splendid work they have done in bringing the European war to a successful conclusion. It is a great day in the history of the world and one that will mark a new era of peace.

WE SING WITH JOY

FOR THE VICTORY WHICH IS OURS

WE feel that we can sing with joy at this great news of the end of the war in Europe. It is a great day in the world today, one that will live long in the memories of all of us. The war has had its dark days and even right near to victory, reverses were experienced that made us stop and think. It has provided some very sober thinking and still provides such thought. But in view of the fact that this is V-DAY, we feel that our hearts should be full of joy and that we can lift our voices in songs of praise for the fine job our sailors, soldiers and airmen have done.

Let us give Thanks

Victory and Peace

REV. J. B. MACLEAN, D.D.

What shall be our first natural response to the announcement of Victory for the arms of the allied nations? Surely it will be Thanksgiving! We cannot but acknowledge with gratitude the debt we owe to the battle-scarred veterans of the war on sea and on land and in the air. And in reverent gratitude, with bared heads and humble hearts, we must now and ever keep in remembrance the dear names of those who laid down their lives in sacrifice for us. We must, too, make grateful acknowledgment of the debt we owe to our noble allies—to the United States, and to Russia, and to the no-less gallant smaller powers who out of their own shattered fortunes helped us as they were able. No one nation was sufficiently strong, sufficiently prepared, to bear alone the tremendous assault of the powerful and thoroughly well prepared aggressor. It was only by uniting our resources and by making a common all-out effort that victory for us was made humanly possible. But first and last, we must remember the God of Battles, the Supreme Arbiter Who judged between the nations at war and vindicated the cause for which the allied nations fought. He is Ruler over all, and He is Over-Ruler in the affairs of men and of nations, putting down one and up-raising another. To Him belongs the final verdict, and with Him is the final judgment to be pronounced and executed in wisdom and in justice. Thanks be unto God Which giveth us the victory! Unto Him be the praise and the glory, now and forever: Amen.

And now, with our faces to the future, shall we dare ever to forget the debt that we owe to God Who was our Helper in trouble? We shall surely lose the fruits of victory if, in the time of peace, we do not continue to remember Him and continually seek His Help and Guidance. Peace will have its perplexing problems and its grave dangers; and we shall need continually the guidance of the All-Wise and the help of Almighty God. The war has been won, but the Peace is yet to win. We have learned from experience that where two or three persons are joined together in any form of union, the peace between them may be easily broken. This is true of a family, of a nation and of a family of nations. In order to the continuance of peace there must be mutual trust, mutual good-will, mutual consideration. This is the kind of peace God offers to the children of men. The peace of God is offered to men of His good-will. It is not to be won by conquest but by submission to the terms He has laid down. Peace on earth shall come to men of His good-will. This is the open secret of peace in the heart, in the home, in the nation and in the great family of nations. Let us, each one, be at peace with God, obeying His laws. And as we look abroad upon our neighbours, far and near, let us have the will-to-peace. Let us be lovers of peace and makers of peace, regarding as enemies only those who wilfully persist in the breaking of peace, but welcoming gladly to our fellowship and counsels all those who, notwithstanding their past hostility, have humbly learned, out of bitter experience, the folly and danger of breaking the brotherly covenant, and now sincerely and earnestly seek to walk with their brethren in the way of divinely-given peace.

J. B. MACLEAN.

A Message of Peace

REV. FATHER A. PIGEON

War! War! We are so accustomed to hearing these words, the atmosphere is saturated with all that war brings with it, that it seems like a dream to hear the words of victory, armistice and peace. Is it really true that peace has come back into the world, into our Country, into our town? O Lord, Master of the destiny of all nations, we thank Thee most sincerely. We join our voices with the voices of all the bells of the world, and sing the Te Deum of thanksgiving. War is the fruit and result of sin. War is the spirit of Satan, which fights against the spirit of God, and would like to destroy upon earth the kingdom of God. War is over. If we want to establish in the world a lasting peace, let us make it a peace based upon justice and charity. The salvation of the world rests and only rests in the restoration, whole and entire, of Christian Brotherhood in the Fatherhood of Christ. Let us beg of God to inspire the rulers of the world and the rulers of our Country in their working out of international peace.

But let us not content ourselves with praying for others; let us establish in our midst the laws of Christian morality. Let us observe these divine laws in the education of children, in the mutual relations between husband and wife, in the schools, in the mills, in sports and amusements.

Do we really want a peace such as that promised 1945 years ago to men of good will? Let us kneel down and pray for our rulers, and let us behave in our private and public life as true, faithful and loyal disciples of Christ. There is no other way for the lasting assurance of peace and happiness in our homes, in our country and in the world.

Unless the Lord build the house, those who build it labor in vain. Unless the Lord protect the city, those who guard keep watch in vain. (Psalm 126).

Pastor of St. Joseph's Church

A Victory Message

REV. T. KNOWLES

At last the long awaited day of Victory has come. Let us face it with happy yet sober thoughts and bright hopes. Our first thought must be that of gratitude to Almighty God for all His wonderful deliverances and blessings, without which, victory would have been impossible.

Let us as the Bible teaches us, make our way at once to the House of God and there in the spirit of humility and repentance, confess all our sins and short-comings, and worship Him in spirit and in truth and dedicate ourselves anew to His way of life which alone will save us from future war.

Preparation for this has been made by this and other churches months before victory came.

Next, let us give thanks to God for all our brave men and women who have made this victory possible by their sacrifices and especially those who have made the supreme sacrifice, and also those of our brave Allies, not forgetting the terrific price paid by the Russians, for without the aid of one and all we would not be in this happy position today. And when our boys return let us be big enough and unselfish enough to demand and see to it that they get a righteous and just deal.

Let us also set ourselves to the task of winning the peace, which is just as necessary as winning the war. A task which I believe will be infinitely harder on most Canadians than what the war has been. Let us face each day of the future with hope, confidence, and faith in God and in all humanity, not with any boisterous manifestations or any cheap sentimental and meaningless ways but only in a manner consistent with the true spirit of gratitude to God and with a deep consciousness of what it has cost our men and women who have thus served us and also the many people in the homes from which they came.

A last thought: We have had to fight and sacrifice immeasurably for victory, now let us learn how and be willing to pay the price of living for peace for whatever the cost may be it cannot be compared with the price of war besides the wonderful results obtained. Let us gird ourselves for this worthy task and help make this world a place where our youngest boys will never know what it means to be called to go to war.

Nothing less than this can be true gratitude to those who have so gallantly fought for us in World War No. 1 and No. 2.

Welcomes Victory In Europe

At last the war with Germany has come to an end. We have waited a long time for the dawn of this day. During the years in which we have been at war with Germany, there have been many anxious moments. There have been times when everything looked dark, when we feared that Germany, being so well prepared, would compel the whole of Europe to accept its doctrine.

That day has passed. The victory which we celebrate today has come to us not alone through the strength of arms, but also through the strong conviction of the righteousness of our cause. It has been this firm conviction that kept us going in the darkest days. We all felt that there were big things at stake, things which meant so much to decent living. I think we should all keep this in mind during the days of peace. Since these things are so important, since they were worth all the sacrifice of human lives which have been made, surely every human being ought to be given an opportunity of living such a life.

This day, even among many in Germany, will be a day of great rejoicing. As we have prayed in the past years, for this day of victory, so let us now turn to God in deep humility with thanksgiving. We know that while there will be joy in every home, in many it will be mixed with tears. Victory leads to homecoming, to a reunion of those who are near and dear to one another. There are thousands of homes where there will be no such homecoming. The price of victory has been very great. Especially is this true to the father and mother who may have lost one, or two, or maybe more sons. On this day of victory we not only think of them, but they are in our hearts.

To all the young men and young women, in all the forces, who have fought, suffered and bled for this day of victory, their country owes its deepest gratitude.

Victory Message

DONALD E. BLACK, M.P.

At last the guns in Europe are silent, marking another milestone on humanity's road to a finer civilization. While we may rejoice and humbly express our prayers of gratitude and appreciation to God for our victory, we cannot for one moment relax for our job is by no means through.

As a people we have additional responsibilities in continuing, shoulder to shoulder with our Allies, to assist in the rehabilitation and reconstruction of the greatest devastation the world has ever known. Then, too, on the other side of the globe, we have a contribution to make against another enemy in another war. However, we have been heartened by one glorious victory and that, coupled with our experience and the overwhelming superiority of the United Nations in manpower, ships and resources, should assure reasonably rapid attrition of an already weakened enemy.

As Canadians we may indeed be proud this day for our successful part of the united effort to maintain freedom. Our accomplishments during the war years have been magnificent. We have demonstrated potentialities that will carry us through the years and will achieve for us a more prominent niche in international affairs.

To our Army, our Navy and our Air Force; to the men and women on the home front — every Canadian anywhere who contributed to the most inspiring page emblazoned in the history of a young, enterprising nation — I pay my sincere tribute. To those who bear sorrow as a result of the war I extend my heartfelt sympathy with the reminder that Canada will never forget her gallant heroes and will always take a course in affairs of mankind to make certain that their sacrifices were not in vain.

A greater Canada emerges from this war to enjoy the freedom of a better world.

Out from the gloom of war's dark night—
Gripping the world through blighted years,
Bringing us doubt and haunting fears—
Soon shall be seen Love's kindly light.
Out from the tomb shall life once more
Wake to new beauty; terror shall pass.
God still is God; His will shall be done
Wherever shines his kindly sun.
Hatred, and strife and war have ceased—
There shall be peace!

Donald E. Black, M.P.

Fellow Citizens of Huntingdon County

Today is the day we have hoped for, struggled for, prayed for and above all, it is the day for which many of our young men have made the supreme sacrifice. In the past years there have been times when this day seemed unattainable, there have been times when we have wondered if the sacrifices our young men were making had been vain. But once again Right has triumphed over wrong and today Armistice Day is the token thereof.

J. J. TANNAHILL

We owe a great debt to our young men and women who so gallantly defended our beliefs, on land, on sea and in the air, even at the cost of their lives. We at home helped to the utmost of our ability, and cooperated willingly in doing our part but our offerings seem very small in comparison to what they have endured. Men and women of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, please accept our humble thanks for the great work you have done in making Armistice Day possible. We also give thanks for the great men who led the Allies through these troubled years.

May we make this Armistice the Armistice for all time. But we are not finished yet. We have still more to do if we are worthy of this Armistice. Contingent with Armistice is the eventual return of young people from military life and we must not fail them now. We must do all in our power to make their re-establishment and re-adjustment to civilian life happy and successful.

To those who have lost their dear ones in this terrible war we extend our heartfelt sympathy and may God bless and comfort you all.

PEACE MESSAGE

On September 3, 1939, at 11 a.m., Great Britain went to war in defence of Poland. At that time we were at peace with Germany and we remained so until September 10, 1939, at 12.40 noon. Other nations large and small, followed until it seemed the greater part of the world was armed and in military combat.

What did this last six years mean? It meant for some to handle a gun, to guide a plane or a tank, to guard the high seas, to roll bandages, to constantly sew or knit, to become a blood donor, to work in a Soldiers' Club, to provide and mail parcels and cards to overseas service men, to buy bonds, and all to sit with an ear glued to the radio or an eye searching the headlines for that dream of peace which is about to be realized.

The road to final triumph has been long and hard. Many families in this community have made sacrifices almost too heavy to be borne, and to those families we offer our most sincere sympathy.

With regret for our neglect of God in the past, with a determination not to betray the Christian Way of Life, we have marched confidently on to victory and we sincerely hope that henceforth all nations will strive to live at peace with one another.

To those who have survived the perils of war and will be returning home we hope to offer a peace in keeping with their sacrifices and acknowledging the fundamental personal rights of the individual and to provide them with a home wherein the responsibilities associated with those rights can be cultivated and practised.

It is most important indeed that the Government should take every precaution to make the transition from wartime activity to peacetime progress as smooth and undisturbing as possible. We have the duty of training ourselves to be unselfish, inspiring leaders during the peaceful years ahead.

D. J. O'Connor, M.L.A.

In Gratefulness Of Victory

Dear Sir:

At your request it gives me great pleasure to address the following message to the citizens of the County of Chateauguay on the occasion of V-E day.

"Peace on earth to men of good will." Let us bow before God, adore Him and thank Him.

Today our flag floats everywhere and displays in its tricolour folds its triumphal hymn. Let us respectfully stop and sing with it on this glorious day.

Red, White and Blue—The sun glistens and shines on our three colours. It points with pride to the great deeds accomplished by our fighting men. Let us always recall that it was their bravery, their courage, that kept intact our country, our religion, our homes. May the clamour of our cries of joy reach them everywhere and tell them our respect because they are the bearers of this glory.

All is decked with flags, our arms are outstretched towards those who will cross the great ocean. Whether we are young or old, they will know how anxious and worried we were during their long absence.

Red, White and Blue—Piously, these tints of our nation will lose themselves in the infinite. Our flag vibrates throughout the immensity of this great sky, where the souvenir of our men who fell over there will be jealously kept in the glorious weaves of our banner. These sacrificed lives, forever immortalized, are those of our missing ones. Let us pray for them!

Banderoles, oriflammes of triumph, always remember in this victory those whose country was badly affected. To those with severed arms, to the seriously wounded, to those who well knew the meaning of cold and hunger, may we lend a helping hand and cooperate so that they will recover happy and peaceful days in a life of tranquility.

Chateauguay! You who knew the meaning of memorable battles and whose history is still being glorified today. We highly proclaim, on this day, the deeds of your children, braves who walked in the shadow of the flag. Numerous were the sacrifices they had to make to overcome the perilous obstacles which resulted in this victory of ours today!

Those sailors, who will always be swung to and fro by the blue seas and the waves which will eternally sing their heroism.

Those soldiers, stricken over there on those far-away fields, whose warrior imprints will never be erased.

Those airmen, whose wings were snapped, with you, I greatly deplore those who will never return.

All these brave men have passed into Eternity to revive the glory of those uncrowned heroes.

HONORE MERCIER, M.P.P.,
Chateauguay, P.Q.

To the Citizens Of Ormstown

The success which has followed the arms of our Canadian Forces and those of our Allies has brought us to the doorstep of the enemy and the Day of Victory is at hand.

For this Day we have been anxiously waiting and now that the Bugle has sounded the end of hostilities in Europe, unbridled celebrations will be the order of the day. But although the day of Victory will be a memorable one, it is also a "Memorial Day"—a day of memories—a day which should have a profound effect upon our lives and thoughts, for the heroic dead; died for a purpose, for a principle, for a cause, and it behoves us to continue what they began.

Therefore 'V-Day' should develop in us a higher patriotism. By this I do not mean a wild flag-waving on the one hand and the utter disregarding of our country's laws on the other. True patriotism is something more than pious talk or cheering; it means living and working for the highest ideals of Canadian life.

D. A. BARRINGTON,

On 'V-Day' we are met by a challenge—a challenge which comes from the graves of the dead. Those graves are not silent. They speak. They remind us of what God expects of us and of this land we profess to love.

Yes, 'V-Day' is a 'Memorial' one —a day on which we take a forward look. Memories carry us back to the past, and on this day, the past will warn us to look to the future and to make certain that war shall not again visit us; and to labour zealously to conquer those things that have so long conquered mankind. Therefore, I appeal to the citizens to celebrate V-Day in a manner that shall bring honour to our heroic dead.

I have the honour to be
Yours sincerely,
D. A. Barrington, Mayor.

VICTORY

Just a little word, but what a comforting sound it has in our ears this day. The Nazis have been beaten, we hope we shall never have to fight them again. It has been a hard and bitter war and there has been untold suffering for a very large number. But thanks to the lads of the Navy, Army and Air Force it is over now.

VICTORY

It is only a few hours since the news of Victory in Europe was announced and it seems hard to realize it is true. But we are glad that Hitler has at last been beaten and that the Nazi terror will be ended for those who have suffered for so many years. We are also glad that the boys from this district and from all over Canada will soon be able to return home. Our heart is heavy when we think of those who will not return and we feel that we owe them, and their relatives, a debt that we can never repay.

VICTORY MESSAGE OF THE CANADIAN LEGION

The Victory ! !

WHAT OF IT ? ?

We stand in somewhat similar circumstances many of us did after November 11th, 1918.

A bitter and cruel WAR has been fought and ended.

The same promises, dressed up a bit, have been made by the powers that be, perhaps a little more emphatic this time.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT ?

Are you going to let matters slide as in the period following 1918, when you allowed matters of lesser moment to cloud your vision and dim out the promises then made— Countries fit for heroes to live in where those selfsame heroes were allowed to sell pencils at the corner of the street— The real question is now as then—our right to live in peace and comfort, free from worry and want. Are you going to be content to give our heroes a TERMINABLE job. Is a JOB all they are worth after what they have done for you and this country?

Are you satisfied to allow the same manipulation of workers that has so long existed, whereby the few have all and the workers very little?

Or are you going to see that there is a just and true distribution to each individual worker and fighter of the wealth he creates and has to defend?

Are you going to see that there will be no such thing as UNEMPLOYMENT?

Do you agree that there should be both very rich and very poor in this land of such enormous wealth?

Think over these questions, because these are the questions that our heroes are going to ask and require proper answers to when they come HOME.

Belgian Parliament Is Reopened Without Emotion After 4 Years

Brussels, — Its sovereignty fully restored, the Belgian Parliament resumed business without a tremor of emotion. It was the first liberated government on continental Europe to gather in its traditional meeting place, and those of us who expected to witness a spirited demonstration were vastly disappointed. The Chamber of Representatives foregathered without pageantry and with less excitement than one might see in the American House of Representatives after a summer recess.

First session since May, 1940, was scheduled for 2 o'clock in the afternoon and outside the handsome parliament building there was not more than 200 curious sightseers, most of them British troops bivouacked in the area. Inside the Chamber a display of Allied flags was the only indication that this might be rather an historic occasion. American, British, French, Dutch, Russian and Luxembourg flags hung over the Speaker's rostrum and the visitors' galleries were filled to overflowing.

Promptly at 2 o'clock the representatives filed to their seats, which are arranged almost exactly like those in the American Senate. There were few seats vacant. Of the 202 representatives of the pre-war Chamber, 186 were present.

After a flurry of handshaking and laughter the members settled to their chairs and Franz Van Cauvelaert, president of the Chamber, mounted the rostrum and began his speech. He spoke for 40 minutes in Flemish, which has an equality with French as the official Belgian language. The members who do not understand Flemish had earphones through which they heard a translation of the President's words as he was speaking to them. This is an ingenious system and is made possible by two interpreters who sit at the base of the rostrum and speak a translation of the Flemish into a microphone. Every seat in the Chamber is equipped with an earphone which is wired to the translators' microphone.

The President reviewed the war briefly and drew ovations for Churchill, Roosevelt, Montgomery, Eisenhower, de Gaulle and Stalin. The biggest ovation was given at the mention of Churchill's name.

Robert Gillan, President of the Senate, followed with a speech in French, and the session was ended when Prime Minister Pierlot gave his report.

Throughout the proceedings the members flogeted, walked about and dispatched messages to one another, much as Congressmen do in Washington. It was as though freedom never had fled Belgium and this was just another session of elected representatives such as you might see in any free country in the world.

In short, Belgium was the first country on continental Europe to return to its normal routine.

Pre-D-Day Traffic in U.K. Described

Stupendous Task Performed by British Railways For Victory Outlined

Thanks to an elaborate traffic regulation system, established despite tremendous handicaps, men and supplies for D-Day arrived at their exact piers on split-second schedules, T. D. Slattery, general traffic manager, for the United States and Canada of the British Associated Railways, declared in outlining part of the stupendous task performed by British railways during the war. It was this great effort which started the Allied Nations on to the victory which we are now celebrating. Many stories will be told of the great efforts to achieve this great end that we have looked forward to for the past months, but they could not be told before.

Nearly 25,000 special trains for troops, ammunition and equipment were operated from March 26, the first day fixed for movement of personnel, to the completion of D-Day moves. Another 800 specials of over 30,000 cars conveyed stores and heavy equipment, while ordinary freight trains conveyed over 6,000 cars of supplies and equipment, he recalled.

The all-time traffic peak was reached in the month immediately following D-day, when 17,500 special trains for troops and equipment, destined for the fighting fronts, were run, Mr. Slattery explained, adding that mail and parcels for the troops required another 113 specials, special ambulance trains made over 300 journeys and others were operated to accommodate the large numbers of German prisoners destined for prison camps.

"This record-breaking traffic w all superimposed on a system alrea strained to unbelievable proportions and which in this same month, conveyed 3,500,000 loaded freight cars, operated 25,000 special trains carrying war workers to government factories, and 4,000 coal trains from mines to 'consuming areas,'" Mr. Slattery pointed out.

The amazing results achieved by British railroads under wartime conditions are attributed to close attention to the heavy task and to superb engineering on the tracks, while Canada's Transportation Corps in Britain are credited with considerable assistance.

Mr. Slattery also paid high tribute to the "magnificent transportation efforts" on this side of the Atlantic.

"The railways here," he said, "have without doubt proved worthy of their great heritage and I could not pay higher tribute. "Your vast transportation systems and ours have been welded into one united team in what has been the biggest transportation job in history."

As background, Mr. Slattery explained that the railways represent Britain's largest private enterprise, with 955,000 stockholders and $6,500,000,000 in invested capital, and with equipment including 50,000 miles of track, 2,400 miles of electric tracks, 20,000 locomotives, 64,000 passenger cars, and 1,250,000 freight cars. Of a staff of 668,000 employees, 135,000 are women.

Parents Now Have Control Of Children

Gone is Fear of Offspring Acting as Spies For Nazi Leaders

"Hitler brats," 'teen-age boys and girls who belonged to various German youth organizations, are coming again under parental control in occupied German districts.

Father or mother can now apply a switch to little Fritz or Brunnhild without worrying whether these juvenile political monsters will tell the Nazis that their parents listened to BBC broadcasts late at night.

As a result of the propaganda handed out by the Nazi party in recent years many children gained a twisted loyalty to the Hitler regime which in many cases made them actual spies in their own homes against their relatives and neighbours.

"But these 13 to 16-year-old German boys and girls now have become scared since their country is invaded and they have seen Nazi chieftains they had been taught to follow cringe in fear."

"Their fanaticism has disappeared. Their mothers and grandmothers have told them their day of glory is over and that they will do as they are told at home."

Some of these "teen-age tyrants" who ruled homes capriciously because of the hold they had on terror-bound parents as a result of threats to inform on them have decided now of their own volition they want "to be good."

"I was a member of the Hitler youth movement," said one towheaded youngster, "but now I am glad I can be a boy scout again."

"Youth admires success—and the Nazi leaders now are failures."

Have You Heard the News? The War In Europe Is Over

ISN'T that just grand? Everyone will be pleased that the terrible war has been won and that our boys will soon be coming home. We shall be proud of them when they get back and we have an opportunity to thank each one personally. Our sympathy is extended to those who have lost dear ones, for we know how they will feel on this day and we will ever remember those who sacrificed their lives.

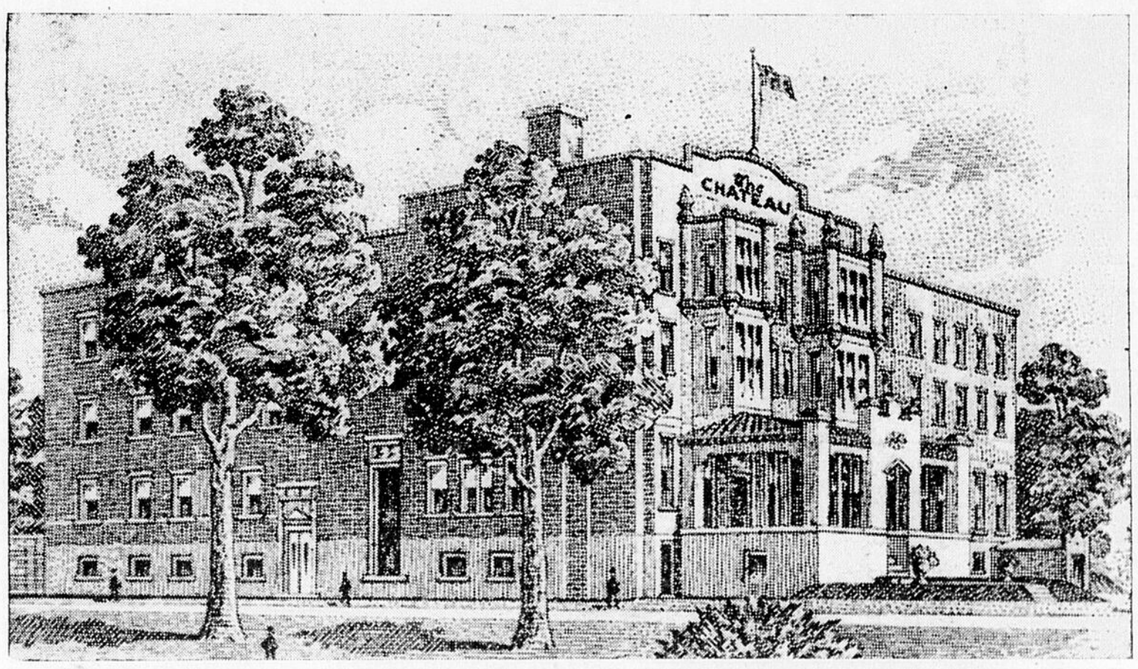
TO-DAY

WE PAY GRATEFUL TRIBUTE



WE have all waited for this day of Victory in Europe and we greet it today with mixed feelings of joy, gratitude and remembrance. We feel joy that a victory has been won over an enemy who has treated the world to some of the most terrible horrors that one nation could force upon another nation. We greet it with gratitude to the men who have fought the battles over the years to bring the victory to us and bring a new era of peace that we hope will be more everlasting than has ever been the case before. It is a gratitude that will ever be remembered in the years to come and one than can never be repaid to those who have fought and died for the cause. We greet it with remembrance of those who have paid the supreme sacrifice both from this district and from the whole of the Dominion and from the other countries of the United Nations.

We do not feel that this is a time for celebrating, in view of the memories that the course of the war has brought to those who have lost loved ones. We truly feel that we can only pay tribute to the victory in a mild way even though it has brought joy to our hearts. There has been so much suffering throughout this war that while relief is felt that at least the European part of the conflict is over, it is no time for levity and loud celebration.

Our thanks are due to all who have fought and will soon be returned to us and we should plan to make their lives as happy as possible when they return to civil life and occupation. The best for them will be none too good as we show our appreciation of the part they played on our behalf and in achieving the victory that is ours today.

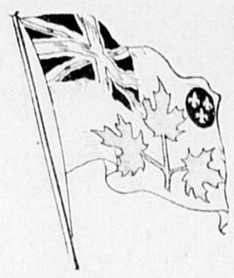
OUR THANKS FOR VICTORY



V-DAY IS HERE

WE have waited a long time for this great day and now it is really here. Our forces have conquered those of the enemy and at least the European part of the war is over. We now look forward to an era of peace and rehabilitation of our fighting men.

During the war there have been many articles which we could not supply our customers, but we hope with the return of more peaceful conditions this trouble will soon be remedied.

But let us give thanks now that victory has been accomplished and our boys will be able to return to their homes. Let us remember also those who have sacrificed their lives that this victory might be ours.

VICTORY IS OURS!

What a grand feeling this news has brought us today. Victory Is Ours—we have been waiting for it ever since D-Day for we knew that this was the next to last blow at the enemy who transgressed the peace of the small nations of Europe and who rocked a world in the fury of the greatest conflict in all history.

We want to offer our quota of thanks to the men of the Navy, the Army and the Airforce, for the magnificent parts they have played in bringing this victory to us. We do not forget to pay tribute to those who have made the supreme sacrifice and to offer our deepest sympathy to the parents and relatives of such men. We want also to express the hope that in the years to come their sacrifice will not have been in vain.

The greatest Victory Now will be in the Peace to come.

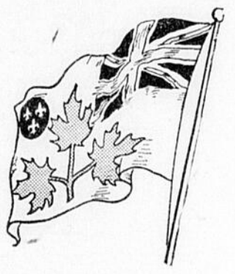
TO-DAY



WE PAY GRATEFUL TRIBUTE

Victory Is Here!

The long awaited day of Victory has now arrived and there is a relieved feeling in the hearts of everyone that at least the war in Europe is over. It has been a long drawn out and hard fought battle, but the outcome was never in doubt, although we passed through some very dark moments. Right must always triumph over wrong in the end and we feel that our way has been the right way all through this war. It is not the time to celebrate in a loud and unrestrained manner, but it is the time to pay grateful tribute for the victory that has been gained this day. Our thanks are due to the Divine Providence that has made this day possible, as well as to the efforts of our fighting forces on all fronts. The suffering has been too great for mass forms of celebration, but nothing can overcome the joy that we feel in our hearts. Let us express our gratitude in a manner befitting the occasion.

THEIR DAY
OUR DAY
V-DAY

The Hour of Triumph

We can be proud and triumphant at this hour of victory over the most cruel and fiendish foe that has ever been fought in any war in history. That we have triumphed over this enemy has been due in no small measure to the strong will and determination of the forces of the United Nations to end forever acts of aggression by others of more militaristic mind. It has also been made possible by the magnificent stand that the people on the home fronts have made to see that all supplies for our fighting men were kept going to them at all times. Today is a national triumph and a world triumph—it may possibly be the triumph of an everlasting peace. This hour will stand out in history far greater than any other event—great though they may have been. This Dominion and the Empire have had triumphs before, but nothing that will ever eclipse this great and shining hour that spells the end of suffering and oppression for many thousands of people in Europe.

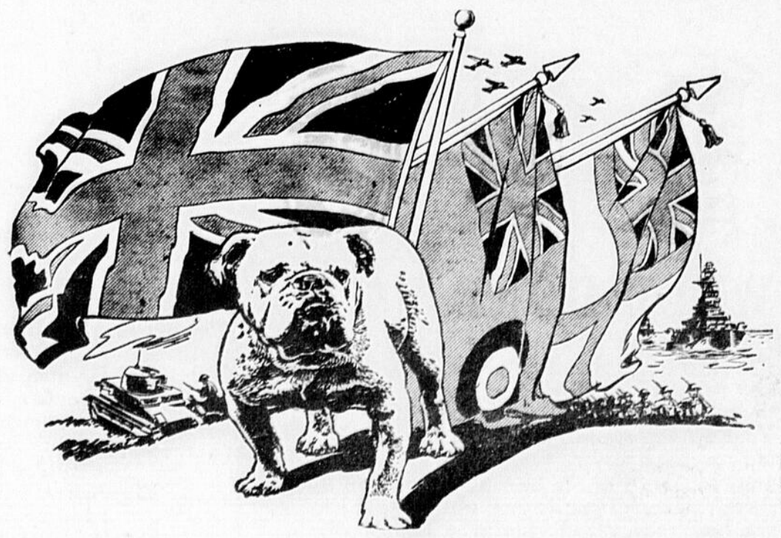
Symbolic of Victory



Through a spirit of determination to carry on against great odds in the beginning of the war that has just ended in Victory for us today, the British Empire has completed one more triumphant effort in its history. After standing alone for almost a year Great Britain with her mighty Commonwealth of Nations, was aided by her splendid friend the United States of America, who shares this victory with us today. We are prouder than ever that we are a part of this great Empire.

WELL DONE BOYS!

We offer you our heartiest congratulations. Our pride in you is matched only by our pride in the freedoms for which you so courageously fight. Your lot has been deadly, bloody battle . . . calling for unsurpassed valour and stamina. The gratitude due you can be seen in the faces of the shackled peoples you have freed . . . in the hopes you have reborn in the hearts of all liberty-loving men. It has taken unrelenting struggle to vanquish the vicious Mussolini-Hitler duet and their cruel plans for global enslavement.

It Was a Job Well Done, Boys!

Son of Mr. and Mrs. George Elder, Athelstan, Que., probably one of the first boys to enlist from the Huntingdon District, as he joined the Black Watch Regiment in Montreal, on September 9, 1939, six days after Great Britain and France declared war on Germany, and one day before Canada made a formal declaration of war. He arrived in England, on September 4, 1940. On Saturday, December 14, 1940, his father received the news of the death of his son while on duty in England.

VICTORY over the Germans has been announced and once again the sun will shine over the people of Europe who have so long suffered at the hands of the enemy. It will bring much relief to the people of this Dominion and to the people of Chateauguay Valley, who have husbands, fathers, sons and sweethearts serving in the forces of freedom. They will soon be freed of their duties and able to return home to their people.

To those who have lost loved ones, we extend deepest sympathy and tender our thanks for the sacrifice they have made in this great effort to rid the world of a fear and oppression that has raged all throughout this war.

We are proud of the part that we all have played in helping to bring this long awaited victory that is now announced.
